Jason Neal Joins Pomona Capital, an Affiliate of Voya Investment Management, to Strengthen Distribution Efforts for Pomona Investment Fund

Voya Investment Management, the asset management business of Voya Financial, Inc. (NYSE: VOYA), announced today that it has hired Jason Neal as vice president and senior regional director of Private Equity to support education and distribution efforts for Pomona Investment Fund (PIF) on behalf of Pomona Capital, a Voya affiliate. Jason is based in New York and reports to Troy Chakarun, managing director, head of Wealth Management Sales, Voya Investment Management.

“Jason is one of the most experienced private equity sales professionals focused on the private wealth market. He adds a tremendous amount of private equity expertise and credibility to the PIF sales team and bolsters our efforts to scale this part of our business,” said Michael Granoff, founder and chief executive officer of Pomona Capital. “Jason will focus on the private wealth market, including registered investment advisers and other wealth managers, family offices, and regional and national broker-dealers.”

Launched in 2015, PIF is a registered investment vehicle designed to offer accredited investors broad exposure to a portfolio of private equity investments managed by experienced general partners. The majority of PIF’s investments are expected to be secondary interests in seasoned private equity funds, with a supplementary focus on primary and direct commitments. Similar to Pomona’s institutional fund offerings, the fund’s strategy seeks to acquire high-quality, mature assets with identifiable near-term liquidity and downside protection at compelling prices.

Jason has over 20 years of private equity experience and a deep background in private equity secondaries and the private wealth market. Prior to joining Pomona, Jason was managing director and head of Business Development and Investor Relations for FlowStone Partners, a Connecticut-based firm focused on providing access to private equity opportunities to high net worth investors and family offices. Prior to joining FlowStone, Jason was a vice president at Landmark Partners, where he led business development and investor relations activities in the private wealth channel, as well as managing select institutional and consultant relationships from 2011 to 2018. Prior to joining Landmark, Jason held numerous roles in the private equity industry including roles at HarbourVest Partners, The Private Edge Group/State Street Corporation, and Kendall Investments.

PIF continues to build out its private equity portfolio, with over 160 underlying partnerships currently held by the Fund, providing its investors with exposure to over 1,400 underlying portfolio companies across all sectors. During the 2nd quarter, the Fund closed on three new transactions, acquiring limited partnership positions in funds managed by Bain Capital, Silver Lake Partners and Permira.
